Serious Illness in 1898

by Dennis Martin

If someone in your family were seriously ill in 1898, there were hospitals available to care for the person - if you could afford the service. If you were a farming family that always tried to do for itself, you might attempt to take care of the person yourself with the help of a doctor. The Lackawanna Historical Society has recently acquired a set of 15 "penny postcards" that relate the story of the Stone family in such a situation.

In 1898, Waldo Stone had a rented farm in Scott, Pennsylvania. He and his wife, Alice, had four children at home Herbert (age 24), Ernest J. (age 22), Emma (age 18) and Alviniza (age 8). Elmer, his oldest son, was a teamster (age 26) living as a boarder on West Market Street, Scranton, at the home of William and Ida McCormick. As a teamster at that time Elmer would have handled a team of horses transporting goods.

Our story starts with a postcard to Mrs. Stone from a woman named Maude (no last name). She may have been a servant or a member of the McCormick family. Her message to Mrs. Stone related, "Elmer didn't go to work today but has been in bed all the time. We are going to have the doctor again tonight. He is no worse but he is so very weak and nervous. His medicine is all gone so we think it will be better to have the Dr. so then we will know what the real trouble is."

Alice went to care for Elmer and most of the other postcards in this collection were from Alice to Emma at home reporting on Elmer's condition. The first stated, "I will try and write a few words. Elmer has spent a very hard night and has not slept scarcely. We had to send for the Dr. about three this morning. He says the disease has broken but it was all that Ida and I can do this morning to hold him in the bed. Hope that Pa will come soon."

Maude soon wrote Emma "Your Mother and Father have just arrived and I will write a few lines to let you know how Elmer is. He has Billious Remittant Fever."

("Billious Remittant Fever" meant that Elmer had an excess of bile, one of his four humors. The term is not used today.) She continued, "Last night he didn't have hardly any fever and this morning, he seems better. The Doc-

A Word from the President...

Hello Everyone,

It was with great sadness that I recently learned of the loss of Tom Horlacher from a fellow trustee. I have known Tom for many years as a friend, skilled and respected architect, and a board member of both the LHS and the Society of the Preservation of the Tripp Family Homestead. His tenure as a valued member and trustee of these two community institutions spans decades. I am certain that Tom's interest in local history and knowledge of historic preservation is what attracted his involvement in these organizations, which are headquartered in two of the city's finest historic homes. He was a guiding force in the restoration and continued preservation of both the Catlin House on Monroe Avenue and the Tripp House on North Main Avenue. Through his work as an architect, Tom was responsible for helping many local residents and community organizations showcase their properties and add to the historic integrity of Northeastern Pennsylvania. No doubt, Tom shared his love of Lackawanna history with everyone he encountered and I know he will be greatly missed by his family, friends and members of the architectural community. Respectfully,

Michael Gilmartin

At the Catlin House...

Genealogy 101

On Saturday, August 18 at 10 am, the Scranton City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will offer a genealogical workshop focusing on where to search for information on ancestors. The workshop, which is free, will provide participants with helpful hints on how to get started with specific focus on connecting to your DAR lineage.

For more details or to register: call Kathy Zinskie, (570)489-5449 or email kzinskie@yahoo.com,

At Our Own Pace: Love, Life and Legendary Lackawanna Politics

Bob Pettinato, Former Lackawanna County Commissioner, will share his recollections and discuss the book he released last year on Sunday, September 16 at 2 pm at the Catlin House. "At Our Own Pace" recalls an important era in the county's development, and offers a unique perspective from someone who lived through it.

A portion of the proceeds of the book will benefit "Peggy's Pathway," a foundation dedicated to funding endometrial and uterine cancer research.

tor is coming again this morning but won't be here before 9:30 so we cannot wait, but we are in hopes that he will say that Elmer is better. Elmer is very restless and says he feels just as though he could fly away. I feel just as though I had seen my best days but guess I won't die.' Will close now as it is late."

The rest of the postcards are from Alice providing updates. On November 25, Alice reported, "Elmer is more comfortable tonight. He is under the influence of Dover Powders." (Dover's Powders were a traditional medicine against cold and fever developed by Thomas Dover.) "Now it is careful watching and good nursing. Since three this morning the doctor has been here about 4 times and has had another Dr. with him twice and they think now if nothing sets in he will get along."

Two days later Alice wrote, "Had to send for the Dr. about midnight. He changed the medicine. We are on the third bottle of wine so you can see he is taking lots of medicine. He worried quite a good deal after Pa went away, was afraid I would have to go home. We think he is doing just as well as can be expected."

In the next message, Alice reported, "I will try and write. It is hard work. Elmer is very restless. Has not slept much. Tonight has teased to go home. The Dr. has put him on a typhoid treatment, said that was the case Sunday night. It is very hard for Pa and I [sic]. I feel I could hardly stand, I am so tired. Ida is almost sick. I did a large washing yesterday, do not think I will wash again until I feel better. Will send it out first. Do not worry any more than you can help. The Dr. says Elmer is doing as well as he can. He comes twice a day and he said Pa and I need rest but I do not see how I can get it with so much to do."

We digress to describe how washing was done at that time. In 1992, the Lackawanna Historical Society conducted a project on the Women's Oral History of Northeastern Pennsylvania. One of the women interviewed was Josephine Redensky Kinack. We will paraphrase her answer. Josephine described how her mother did the weekly washing when Josephine was young. She remembered her mother at the scrubbing board which was on a bench in the kitchen. Her husband would bring the bench in and the galvanized tub and then she'd fill the water from the boiler. She'd put the white things in there and she'd have a paddle. She used soap and bluing on the white clothes and the sun and the wind and even the snow - would kind of bleach the sheets and the pillow cases and everything. They all ironed. The ironing board was always up. One heated the iron on the stove thusly, "You put the iron on the stove and you'd unclip it and take the handle away. Then when you thought it was ready, you'd get the handle again and you'd clip it and bring it over to the ironing board. What would you do if the clothes and sheets came in from the outside frozen? Well, hang them all around the kitchen. My husband worked in the mines for a little while and he wore long underwear and I remember this. I brought the long johns in from the line and they were frozen, so I stood them behind the stove. As the frost came out of them, they sunk right down on the floor." (If you had no boiler, you started by heating the water on the stove.) No wonder Alice was so tired.

Alice's messages continued, "I do not know what to tell you this morning about Elmer. He thinks he does not feel any better. The Dr. says he is doing splendid. I do not. Dr. says he is a very sick man. I feel almost discouraged. Decker was going to sit up last night so we could have a good night's rest. How long do you think I was laid down about three hours. It seems sometimes I could not stand it another minute. The Dr. says if I could only have eight hours rest, it would do us so much good. The Dr. comes twice a day.

Elmer is getting very thin, does not take much nourishment but medicine every hour two kinds and two kinds three times a day."

Finally, her messages became more optimistic. "It is morning once more and it is almost three weeks since I have been home. Seems like a year. I wish I knew how much longer I have to stay. The Dr. said yesterday Elmer's fever was all gone but will not let him sit up or have anything solid to eat. It is hard to take care of him, has rested good since then. His head is not all right yet. He is quite flitty at times, dare not leave him alone very long at a time. The Dr. does not come but once a day now."

After this, she noted the following. "It is just three weeks today since I came from home. If I could only come home this morning, would be so glad. I have taken care of Elmer all night. He has rested quite comfortable, can sleep a few minutes at a time. It is after 4 and no one up yet. Do wish someone would stir. I am just as sleepy as I can be."

Finally, she wrote "Yesterday, I bathed Elmer and he went to sleep and has slept the most of the time since only medicine time. When the Dr. came last night, he said we should not wake him, just let him sleep. He has lost so much sleep, it was the best medicine. He told me to undress and go to bed. Said I must have rest so I minded. Pa lay on the bed with him until about half past three or four then I got up and got him some broth. I have been asleep since. So you see, I have rested first rate last night. Think if nothing, he will gain right along." "The reason I did not write yesterday - forgot to get the cards Sunday night. Could not get them early enough in the morning. Elmer has rested good last night. The Dr. says he is doing splendid. Do hope he will keep right

After this, the postcards stopped. Looking at the census the following year, Elmer is back at work. In fact, he led a reasonably long life. But Alice died before that census was taken.

on. Of course, he gets discouraged. I expect he

In Memoriam

In May, the Lackawanna Historical Society was saddened by the passing of one of our trustees, Tom Horlacher. Tom was a member of the Society for more that forty years and a founding member of the city's Architectural Heritage Association. In 1980 he donated his services as a registered architect to assist us with some much needed restoration work to the exterior of the Catlin House. The following year he was nominated and elected to serve as a Trustee. Since then, Tom has been invaluable to our organization, providing his guidance, offering advice and sharing his expertise. As a member of the LHS

Building and Ground committee he played a vital role in ensuring the preservation of our home and, at the same time, keeping us up to date on any needed upgrades like the 1989 additions of a ramp and restroom to improve accessibility. Tom was a true gentleman who contributed so much to the Society and the community in his dedication to preserving local architecture. He will be greatly missed.

Archbald Portraits Reunited

Members who are familiar with the portraits hanging at the Catlin House will be excited to learn the LHS recently received a generous donation. Carolyn Krach, on behalf of the grand-children of James Archbald VI, donated of two portraits: one of James Archbald and one of his wife Sarah. The paintings, which were picked up in May at Carolyn's home in Maryland by Assistant Director Sarah Piccini and LHS volunteer Tom Cipriano, are believed to be copies made by John Willard Raught in 1901 of original portraits painted by C.L. Elliot in 1845.

Before receiving this donation, LHS had another copy of Sarah's portrait hanging in the living room but did not have a portrait of James. Carbondale Historical Society had a copy of the portrait of James but not Sarah. Therefore LHS decided to keep the portrait of James but offer

Sarah's portrait to our friends in Carbondale. Carbondale Historical Society President S. Robert Powell sent this email report after moving Sarah's portrait:

The portrait and I made to back to Carbondale in good shape.

As I was unloading Mrs. Archbald from my truck, a Carbondale police car passed by, and the young officer in the police car recognized that I needed help with Mrs. Archbald. He stopped immediately, and Mrs. Archbald then got carried (with a smile on her face, suddenly) by the handsome young officer into City Hall.

When I took Mrs. Archbald into the room where Mr. Archbald hangs, if you please, suddenly there was a smile on his face. I quickly shut the door and left the two of them alone.

Local history and historic preservation, as you know, frequently require compassion, tact, and good judgement.

James Archbald, the father-in-law of LHS benefactor George Catlin, immigrated from Scotland as a teenager. He was a self-taught engineer who designed and built a portion of the Erie Canal before being offered a position with the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company. He became Superintendent, in charge of the construction of the company's gravity railroad and coal mines in Carbondale. When Carbondale was chartered in 1851, James Archbald was elected the new city's first mayor. He succeeded George Scranton as general agent of the fledgling Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad in 1855, and was named chief engineer in 1858. James married Sarah Augusta Frothingham in 1832, and the couple had five children. The family lived along Ridge Row in Scranton after moving from Carbondale in 1855.

LHS Director Mary Ann Moran Savakinus, and Carbondale Historical Society President S. Robert Powell examine new portraits.

Are you receiving History BYTES?

In March, LHS launched a new digital newsletter, "History Bytes!" The newsletter, delivered bimonthly via email, is edited by Society member Rick Sedlisky and contains book reviews, historical articles, information about upcoming events hosted by the Society and our community partners, as well as relevant web links. The response has been very positive and we continue to receive kudos from members who are enjoying it.

We have also been excited to include a special edition with each issue of more lengthy articles that have been contributed by our members and friends. Included with the March issue was "A Thousand Cuts: Or, How Soo Hoo Doo Got Run Out of Town" by Susan Boslego Carter which originally appeared in an issue of Chinese America: History and Perspectives and was reprinted with permission of the journal's editor, Jonathan Lee. A special edition written by Joe Rudzinski entitled "Who Were the First Settlers of Throop?" was offered in May.

To receive History Bytes, please send your email address to lackawannahistory@gmail.com
